PosDoc Fellowship

14 November, 2016

A call is currently open for a PosDoc fellowship under the project “Por3O - Portuguese Olive Oil Omics for traceability and authenticity”, PTDC/AGR- PRO/2003/2014 cofinanced by FEDER and Orçamento de Estado, through Fundação para a Ciência e Tecnologia, under the following conditions:

Scientific Area: PhD in Chemistry, Food Science or related areas

Admission requisites: PhD in Chemistry, Food Science or related areas with previous hands-on experience on the analysis of bulk and compound specific stable isotopes (C, N, O, H, S) in food matrices by EA-IRMS and GC-IRMS. Previous experience in ICP-MS elemental analysis in food matrices will also be considered as a relevant skill.

Work Plan:

Por3O Project is based on a genomic and metabolomic approaches and the main goals are: the authenticity of extra virgin olive oils, considering geographic and varietal aspect, and the genuineness of the product to yield a useful tool for screening for fraud and for the olive oil certification.

The PosDoc fellow should therefore:

- be able to perform autonomously the analytical measurements of bulk and compound specific carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, hydrogen and sulfur isotopes in olive oils;
- be able to work in multidisciplinary teams;
- collaborate in teaching and supervising of undergraduate and graduate students

Legislation: A fellowship contract will be made between Évora University and the fellow, following the set of rules listed in the Évora University Research Statute (service order nº1/2011), the Statute of the Research Fellow (Law nº40/2004 de 18 de Agosto e Decreto-Lei nº 202/2012 de 27 de Agosto), and respecting all the legislation and regulations listed in the Regulamento de Formação Avançada e Qualificação de Recursos Humanos da FCT.
