3. Program description:

The Doctoral Program in Archeology encompasses a profoundly interdisciplinary perspective in order to galvanize diversified approaches regarding the understanding of archaeological phenomena from Prehistory to the Industrial Period.

Accordingly, this Program aims to improve researchers and graduates capacities of inventorying, analyzing, understanding and synthesizing ideas and knowledge in the specific field of Archeology or in related fields. We also aim to increase students ability to expand knowledge in this same field through the use of theoretical concepts, methods and techniques of analysis

This program also seeks to develop critical thinking and reflection and to promote the development of new paradigms and research works according to the highest standards of scientific and academic quality. Students are expected to develop an original research through critical analysis of the addressed issues, contributing, in this way, to the furthering of knowledge in this scientific area. It also expected that the students develop their ability to communicate (orally and in writing) with peers, the academic community, and society in general, on the issues of this disciplinary domain.
